This is final copy, not a draft. Every string below is labelled so it can be wired without guessing. Sixteen sections, in the ratified order — nothing added, nothing dropped, nothing reordered. Language: English, with `zerado` and `sinopse` kept in Portuguese and each explained once, in a clause, the first time a reader meets it (Q5-b).

Casing, per `naming.md` : the product is always `Zerado` ; the command/domain is always lowercase `zerado` ; the in-app status, in prose, is lowercase and italicised on its first appearance on the page — that first appearance is in §05, below — and plain lowercase after.

No dates, no version numbers, no download links, no prices, no user counts, no testimonials appear anywhere in this document. The roadmap (§12) marks Phase 1 In progress and phases 2–4 Planned; no phase is marked done, and no done-equivalent status exists (amended 2026-08-25 — see §12; at rev A all four read Planned). Nothing is downloadable yet — the CTA is a waitlist, everywhere it appears.

§01 Amendment record

Copy that changed after ratification. The rev-A wording is recorded beside each change in its own section, so the trail shows what was amended and why rather than only what the page says now.

The ratification source itself is not in this repository. `ratification/decisions.md`, which carries the original Q3 and Q6 text, was deliberately left unpublished (`docs/REDACTIONS.md` §1) and lives in the ForgePlay output tree. It still carries the rev-A wording for both decisions amended below and must be amended there too – it is outside this repository and outside this branch.

Amendment 1 – 2026-08-25 · §12 roadmap status

Founder instruction: “we need to show Phase 1 ‘In progress’”. Phase 1 work started 2026-08-25. Phases 2–4 unchanged; nothing marked done; still undated. The design contract was amended in step — `design/blueprint.md` §1.0, Amendment 1, rev A → rev B.

Amendment 2 – 2026-08-25 · §06 and §14, Steam in the present tense

At rev A the page said “Steam is built and works” and “Steam syncs today”. There is no Go code, so both were false. Moved to the future tense; tense only.

Amendment 3 – 2026-08-25 · §11 and §14, no premium account

Amends ratified decision Q3. Founder instruction, verbatim: “let’s not have premium account for now and only donation, so we’re not commercial app.”

The Phase 4 community layer is now stated as donation-supported. Every mention of a premium account or a paid tier is removed from §11 and from both money answers in §14.

Ratified decision Q6 is unchanged and still governs: disclosure is not an ask. The page states that the layer will be donation-supported; it does not invite a donation. There is still no donate button, no sponsor button and no funding CTA anywhere on the page — there is nothing to donate to yet.

Amendment 4 – 2026-08-25 · §14 and §16, the affiliate model is dropped

Amends ratified decision Q6. The founder’s condition, verbatim: “affiliate links I don’t think is commercial since I’m not charging customers and just using the money to maintain servers. But if it is a must to fit the non-commercial, drop it, and keep only the donation.”

That condition is met. IGDB’s published test for its free tier is whether the project generates revenue — not whether users are charged, and not what the money is spent on; its stated rationale is that it does not want to earn from projects that are not earning, and its paid tier targets “companies or projects generating revenue”. An affiliate commission is revenue generated by the project. So the affiliate model is dropped.

- The footer’s affiliate disclosure is replaced by a truthful money statement: Zerado is free software, earns nothing, and the Phase 4 layer will be donation-supported.
- Both §14 money answers rewritten.
- The price-intelligence feature (§07) is untouched. All-time low, current price and the wait-or-buy verdict all stay exactly as ratified. Only the affiliate tag on an outbound link is dropped, and the page never described that tag in the first place — so §07 needed no copy change at all.
- `content/seo.md` and the page’s JSON-LD were checked: they carry no monetization language, no `offers`, and no `price`. Nothing to amend.

Headline:

Pick a mood. Get a game. Play it tonight.

Subhead:

Zerado reads your entire library — Steam first, then PlayStation, GOG, EA, and the cartridges still on your shelf — and answers the only question that actually matters at 11pm: what do I play? It runs in your terminal, works with the network off, and everything it knows lives in one file on your machine.

Heading: Sorted by mood, not genre

Intro line:

Genre tells you what a game is. Mood tells you what tonight is for. Zerado sorts by the second one.

Card 1

- Title: Mindless grind
- Body: Repetitive, low-stakes, doesn't ask for your attention. For the night you want to zone out, not think.

Card 2

- Title: Story rich, kind of sad
- Body: Something to feel, not just clear. For the night you want to sit with a story, not race through one.

Card 3

- Title: Quick fifteen minutes
- Body: Starts fast, ends clean, fits in the window you actually have before bed.

Card 4

- Title: Tactical, full focus
- Body: Wants your whole attention and rewards it. For the night you have the attention to spend.

Image slot: The mood picker on screen. Alt text: "Mockup of Zerado's mood picker in the terminal, showing mood categories — including 'Mindless grind' and 'Quick fifteen minutes' — next to the games that match each one."

Heading: Where each game stands

Intro line:

Four states, one for every game in the library.

State 1

- Glyph + label:  NOT STARTED
- Line: In the library. Untouched.

State 2

- Glyph + label:  IN PROGRESS
- Line: Currently being played.

State 3 — the payoff line

- Glyph + label:  ZERADO
- Line: Finished. Zerado is Portuguese for beaten — cleared, 100%'d — from the arcade counter that ran past its last digit and rolled back to zero. The product is called Zerado. Marking a game zerado, in Zerado, is the whole point of it.

State 4

- Glyph + label:  ABANDONED
- Line: Started, set down, not coming back to it.

§07

Ø6 · one-collection

Heading: One collection, everything you own

Connected stores:

Steam is what Phase 1 builds – your library, playtime and status, kept current on its own. PlayStation, GOG and EA come after: connect an account, see it in the same list.

(Amended 2026-08-25. At rev A this read "Steam syncs today –..." and the Steam store row rendered `status="live"`. No Go code exists, so the present tense was a false capability claim – the exact thing this repository's own review bar forbids. Tense only; nothing else in §06 changed. Reverting is a one-line change the day Steam sync ships.)

The physical shelf:

Add the discs and cartridges next to your desk by hand – title, platform, done. Each one gets the same mood tag and status as anything synced automatically, and, once cover art and sinopse – Portuguese for synopsis, a short plot summary – are wired in, the same page as everything else. A physical copy isn't a second-class row in the list.

Image slot: Cover-art grid, mixed synced and hand-added titles, one marked Physical. Alt text: "Mockup of a cover-art grid showing synced and manually-added games side by side, with one cover labelled 'Physical' to show a hand-entered disc or cartridge sitting in the same collection as everything else."

07 · price-intelligence

Heading: When to buy, not just what to buy

Intro line:

Say what you can spend. Zerado checks today's price against the lowest that game has ever gone, and tells you plainly whether today is a good day to buy.

Worked example — labelled as an example, not live data:

*A game already in your library is $15 today — inside budget. Its all-time low is $8, three months ago. The verdict: "$15, and in budget. It's been $8. Maybe wait."

Caption under the example:

Illustrative numbers. Price data comes from IsThereAnyDeal once Zerado is connected — nothing above is a live quote.

Comments, reviews and public profiles. These run on servers, and servers cost money — so this part will be supported by donation once it exists. Heading: Roadmap

Intro line:

Four phases, in order. Phase 1 is under way – nothing here is marked done, because that would be the one dishonest line on this page.

Phase 1

- Number/name: Phase 1 — CLI/TUI MVP
- Line: Your library, your statuses, stored locally.
- Status: In progress

(Changed from "Planned" on 2026-08-25, on the founder's instruction — "we need to show Phase 1 'In progress'" — when Phase 1 work started. In progress is not done: no phase is marked done, and nothing on the page claims a capability exists. The marker co-renders colour + glyph + label per brand-manual.md §3, using the same `--z-state-in-progress` token and  glyph as the product's own IN PROGRESS game state.)

Phase 2

- Number/name: Phase 2 — Enrichment
- Line: Covers, synopsis, prices, moods.
- Status: Planned

Phase 3

- Number/name: Phase 3 — Recommendations & Budget
- Line: What to buy, and whether to wait.
- Status: Planned

Phase 4

- Number/name: Phase 4 — Social & Mobile
- Line: Sync, community, the phone apps.
- Status: Planned

(No dates render on any phase — undated, ordered phases with a status marker only, until told otherwise. Whether the roadmap carries dates is a separate open question and has not been answered.)

S14

13 · after-phase-4

Heading: After Phase 4 — ideas, not promises

Body:

Heading: QuestionsQ: Is it free?

Yes, and using it always will be. Zerado costs nothing and earns nothing – there is no commission on any link on this page and nothing here is for sale. Once the Phase 4 community layer exists it will be supported by donation, because comments and public profiles need a server and servers cost money. There is no premium account and no paid tier.

Q: Do I need anything from Steam? Does my profile have to be public?

A free Steam API key, which takes a minute to generate. And yes – Steam only returns a library if the profile is public, or if the key belongs to that same account. If a profile is private, Steam won't share the list; that's a Steam setting, not something Zerado can work around.

Q: Does my data leave my machine?

Your library lives in one SQLite file on your machine, and nothing needs an account to use it. The only network traffic is Zerado reaching out to the services you've connected – Steam, price data – using your own keys. Nothing about your library is sent to a Zerado -run server, because there isn't one.

Q: Which stores work today, and which are later?

None of them yet – nothing is runnable. Steam is what Phase 1 builds; PlayStation, GOG and EA follow. Physical discs and cartridges will be entered by hand from day one – no store integration required for those.

(Amended 2026-08-25. At rev A this read "Steam is built and works." – false, and the same claim as §06. Tense only.)

Q: Can I run my own server?

There's no server to run. Zerado is local-first: it reads your library and stores the result in one file on your own machine. The one thing that will eventually run centrally is the Phase 4 community layer – comments, reviews, public profiles – because sharing a comment with someone else requires a server somewhere.

Q: How is this paid for?

Right now it is not paid for at all – Zerado earns no money and nothing on this page is for sale. From Phase 4 the community layer will be donation-supported, because it is the one part that needs a server to run. Using Zerado will never cost anything.

Money disclosure:

Zerado is free software and earns no money. There is no commission on any link on this page, nothing here is for sale, and there is no funding ask anywhere on it. The Phase 4 community layer will be donation-supported when it exists.

(Amended 2026-08-25. At rev A this band carried an affiliate-commission disclosure. The affiliate model is dropped, so there is no commission to disclose — the band now states the money position that is actually true. The band itself is kept: removing it would leave a structural gap the ratified footer layout does not anticipate, and “we earn nothing” is a statement worth making explicitly on a page that used to say otherwise.)
